SAN FRANCISCO (October 25, 2004) – The Mortgage Bankers Association (MBA) awarded the Certified Mortgage Banker (CMB) designation, the highest professional designation for the real estate finance industry, to 89 mortgage banking professionals in a ceremony held at MBA's 91st Annual Convention & Expo in San Francisco.

CMB candidates must amass 150 points, earned through a combination of professional experience; secondary education; continuing education through MBA-sponsored events and CampusMBA courses; and participation in MBA at the local, state and/or national level. After accumulating the required points and passing a comprehensive written exam, candidates must demonstrate industry knowledge by passing an oral exam conducted by a panel of Certified Mortgage Bankers.

Designation candidates have the option of choosing among the Commercial CMB, Residential CMB or Master CMB designations. The Master CMB is a combination of both commercial and residential mortgage banking disciplines, while the Residential CMB and Commercial CMB focus on their respective subfields of the mortgage industry. Candidates must either work for an MBA member Co. or be a member of a recognized state MBA.

"The CMB designation is the pinnacle of dedication, excellence and integrity in the mortgage lending industry, and these recipients should be very proud of their achievement," said new MBA Chairman Michael Petrie, CMB. "Acquiring the designation is demanding, and requires a broad knowledge of real estate finance. These professionals are the leaders in the industry and not only create a higher standard of professionalism, but help to mold the industry's future."

Since the program's inception in 1973, 740 mortgage banking professionals have received the CMB designation. This year's class is the largest in the history of the program. Following is the list of the 2004 designees.
